

BOD and TOD:
Together at Last (I hope)

N. Williams Ave.

Portland Design Works
Friendly Bike Guest House
Metropolis Cycle Repair
Free Bike Help PDX
Abraham Fixes Bikes
United Bicycle Institute
Queen Bee Designs

The City Has Noticed

PortlandTribune
Metro News | Opinion | Entertainment | Sports | Sustainable | Classifieds | Contact Us

Google™ Custom Search  Search x

Printer-friendly version Email story link

Bikes mean business on Williams

Cycling culture proves lucrative on Portland's 'best bike street'

BY PETER KORN
The Portland Tribune, Aug 19, 2010 (3 Reader comments)

Business is so good for Abraham Sutfin that he's about to take a week-long summer vacation. Not bad for the owner of a one-man bicycle repair shop — Abraham Fixes Bikes — that opened in May on North Williams Avenue.

CHRISTOPHER ONSTOTT / TRIBUNE PHOTO
Steve O'Neil assembles a rear bicycle hub during a repair class at the United Bicycle Institute. The institute brings bike enthusiasts from around the world to the North Williams Avenue location.

But it's no surprise, given Sutfin's location at the stoplight corner of North Williams and Fremont Street

"North Williams Avenue is fast becoming the city's most bike-oriented street, with local businesses tapping into the steadily growing commuter scene."

— Portland Tribune, August 19th, 2010

One of three on-street bike corrals currently installed (a fourth is on the way).

Implications for Transit?

BOD + TOD = BFF?

— Jonathan Maus, BikePortland.org