Transit Agency Practices in Interacting with People Who Are Homeless – New Possibilities

Presentation at Rail~Volution
October 23, 2018
TCRP Syntheses (This is Synthesis 121)

- Snapshot in time
- How transit agencies are dealing with a specific issue
The Issue

- Individuals struggling with homelessness often utilize public transit vehicles or facilities as shelters from weather conditions and as safe places.
- Transit agencies wish to preserve the quality of the transit environment.
Why Is This Important?

- Many transit passengers are not comfortable in the presence of homeless persons
- This discomfort can discourage ridership
- This discomfort can also affect the image of transit
This Study

- Literature review
- Online survey of transit agencies
  - 55 completed surveys from 65 agencies
- Case examples
The Public Library Perspective

- Libraries and transit facilities: public and safe
- ALA guidelines on policies and procedures regarding user behavior
Policies and regulations that impose restrictions on library access should be based solely upon actual behavior and not upon arbitrary distinctions between individuals or classes of individuals. Policies should not target specific users or groups of users based upon an assumption or expectation that such users might engage in behaviors that could disrupt library service.
Trajectory of Agency Responses

- Not our problem
- Do something!
- Enforcement
- Partnerships AND Enforcement
Extent to Which People Who Are Homeless Are an Issue by Agency Size

- Large agencies
- Medium agencies
- Small agencies
- Overall

Legend:
- Major issue
- Minor issue
- Not an issue
Case Example: Coffee with a Cop

- UTA Transit PD/Salt Lake City PD
- Build trust
- Engage individuals who are homeless in a non-crisis situation
- Coffee, doughnuts and discussion
- Personal hygiene items vs. doughnuts
Case Example: Operation STOP

- City of Phoenix PD/Valley Metro
- Address behavioral issues/gateway crimes AND connect individuals with social services
- Combines real penalties with inducements
- Closes the “revolving door” through broad partnerships
Other Case Examples

- Madison, WI: partnerships with police and social service agencies
- Washington, DC: warming buses on cold nights
- Fort Worth, TX: treating all customers with respect and how this changes attitudes
Challenges

- Funding
- Inconsistency across municipal/county lines
- Recognizing a “treatable moment”
- Metrics to measure success
How-to Matrix Suggested by Case Examples

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Question</th>
<th>Approach</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>How do I begin?</td>
<td>Establish policies based on behavior</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How do I enforce the policies?</td>
<td>Work with transit police (if existing) and local law enforcement to devise effective enforcement strategies with the goal of ensuring and enhancing the safety and comfort of all customers. Real penalties are an important aspect of enforcement.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Will enforcement alone work?</td>
<td>Experience suggests that inducements are needed along with penalties to make real changes in individuals’ behaviors. Partnerships with social service agencies and others can yield important benefits.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How do I find partners?</td>
<td>If you do not know where to begin, start with the local (city or county) Human Services agency. Agency staff will direct you to agencies and provide contacts within those agencies.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How do I fund a program?</td>
<td>Funding is challenging for all parties, but partnerships help to share the cost. Seek out grant opportunities. Keep in mind that actions to address disruptive behavior are important to your customers and affect their perceptions of your agency.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anything else?</td>
<td>One agency noted that training “cultivates perceptions” at all levels: agency personnel, law enforcement, customers, and the broader community.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Conclusions

- This is an issue for transit agencies
- Successful policies target behavior rather than groups of individuals
- Partnerships are essential
- Enforcement is necessary but not sufficient
Conclusions continued

- Transit agencies will never “solve” the problem of homelessness
- Successful outcomes for individuals who are homeless and for transit agencies
- Agencies can (and deserve to!) acknowledge their role in these success stories
Postscript

- Customers may still be uncomfortable
- Programs may be already going on in your community:
  - Religious groups
  - Others
San Diego Episcopal Diocese

- Interfaith program
- Portable showers at a different church every week
- Local hair salon offers free haircuts
- Change of clothes/personal hygiene items
- All volunteer effort
Lava Mae

- “Taking radical hospitality™ to the streets” to rekindle dignity and hope
- Convert public transportation buses into showers and toilets on wheels
- Open-source toolkit and platform on-line to help start similar programs elsewhere
Resources

- TCRP Synthesis 121: Transit Agency Practices in Interacting with Persons Who Are Homeless
- dan@danboyleandassociates.com
- https://lavamae.org/